

Travel back in time
by staying at an old,
traditional Japanese house!

Kabutoya Ryokan | Hinoharamura

A family sitting by the Irori (hearth) in a house with a thatched roof, and the sound of the gentle stream nearby... This is the image of an old, traditional household in Japan, nearly lost to time. In this busy modern age, we sometimes long for that kind of slow life, coexisting with nature. In Tokyo Tama, there are still some old Japanese houses with thatched roofs that offer accommodation and introduce the traditional way of life in the woodlands. Some such facilities include the Kabutoya Ryokan, Janoyu Onsen, where visitors can quietly enjoy their holidays, surrounded by beautiful nature.

兜

家

Hinohara mura

Kabutoya Ryokan

This ryokan, or Japanese inn, was established 400 years ago, and its 200-year-old building is a wooden, 4-storey Kabuto style house with a hipped roof. The word "Kabuto" refers to a warrior's helmet. Their dishes use local ingredients. Guests can also enjoy a traditional Japanese atmosphere. Special accommodations available for Muslim guests.

🏠 2612, Kazuma, Hinohara mura
🕒 IN15:00 OUT10:00 / Closed on Thursdays (Open during the peak seasons and public holidays)

蛇の湯

Hinohara mura

Janoyu Onsen Takarasou

This accommodation facility was established over 300 years ago and the guesthouse is an impressive, Kabuto (warrior's helmet) style architecture. The facility is also popular for its deliciously rustic dishes prepared with ingredients from the mountains, and the excellent quality of the historic Janoyu hot spring.

🏠 2465, Hinohara mura 🕒 IN15:00 OUT 10:00 / Irregular holidays